

CONSOLE.

BY CHRISTINA G. ROBERTS. Consider The lilies of the field whose bloom is brief; We are as they; Like them we fade away, As doth a leaf.

Consider The sparrows of the air of small account; Our lives are both; Whether they fall or mount— He guards us too.

Consider The lilies that do neither spin nor toil, Yet are most fair; What profits all this care And all this toil?

Consider The birds that have no barn nor harvest woe; Much more our Father seeks To do us good.

RUSSIA.

The Attempt on the Life of the Emperor of Russia. THE ASSASSIN. The man who attempted to assassinate the Emperor Alexander is about twenty-one years old, and apparently well educated. He speaks pure Russian. It has been said that he is a farmer, but the more general opinion is that he is a student. Immediately after his attempt, and upon being seized, he cried out to the people, "All this I have done for you; he (the Czar) has cheated you—he has not given you enough land."

They found some papers on his person. One of the documents is in the form of a proclamation to the people of Russia, in which it is announced, "The world will not or can never enjoy peace until all the princes have been destroyed."

The American residents in St. Petersburg have congratulated the Czar on his escape, and received a very gracious reply. Annexed is a copy of the ADDRESS OF THE AMERICAN RESIDENTS OF ST. PETERSBURG AND THE EMPEROR'S ANSWER.

A meeting of merchants and other Americans residing at St. Petersburg was held on the 27th of April last. It was unanimously agreed that an address should be presented through General Clay, our Minister, congratulating the Emperor Alexander on his fortunate escape from the attempt recently made on his life. We subjoin the address, which was read by Mr. J. M. Smith.

To His Imperial Majesty Alexander II, Emperor and Autocrat of all the Russias, etc. With devout thankings to Almighty God for the preservation of your Imperial Majesty from all harm on the 27th of April, 1868, the American residents of the United States of America, residing in and near St. Petersburg, few in number, but moved by the most common sense, and deeply affected by all the misdeeds of their countrymen, and with respectful joy before your Majesty their earnest assurance of profound horror at the wicked attempt on your life, and with heartfelt rejoicing at its failure, beg to offer to your Imperial Majesty, to your Majesty the Empress, and to all the Imperial family, their humble and sincere congratulations that your Majesty's life was so protected by Providence and the base design against it so completely frustrated.

Sympathizing most honestly and fully with the multiplied instances of indignation and gratitude which this event calls forth from all loyal, affectionate, and patriotic souls in Russia and with the benevolent wish that all our countrymen should not only be throughout the civilized world, towards so good, so kind, so beneficent a monarch, who is not only a father to his people, but also a benefactor to all other nations, like his august father, has been especially and always so generous and friendly to our own country and fellow-citizens, we very respectfully beg to offer to your Majesty, for whose long life and happiness we earnestly pray, this testimony of the unfeigned and spontaneous feeling of Americans in St. Petersburg.

WILLIAM L. WINANS, WILLIAM MURRAY, GEORGE M. PRINCE, F. C. FRATT, GEORGE H. HUNTER, W. B. EDWARDS, HORATIO AMES, T. O. SMITH, WILLIAM M. WINANS, EDWARD BROWN, JAMES MITCHELL, DUNSTON, April 6, 1868.

REPLY OF THE EMPEROR. ST. PETERSBURG, April 8, 1868. General—The Emperor has directed me to request of you to be good enough to inform me, in writing, of the address at St. Petersburg, which met to send an address to his Majesty, the thanks of my august master for the sentiments which they express towards me.

Receive, General, the assurance of my very distinguished consideration. G. NICHOLSON. To General Clay.

The Death of Mrs. Carlyle. From the London Star, April 14. Mrs. Carlyle died on Saturday under very peculiar circumstances. She was taking her usual drive in Hyde Park about 4 o'clock, when her little favorite dog, which was running by the side of the brougham, was run over by a carriage. She was greatly alarmed, and the dog was not seriously hurt. She lifted the dog into the carriage, and the man drove on.

Not receiving any call or direction from his mistress, as usual, he stopped the carriage, and discovered the body of the dog, which was near at hand. When this was discovered that she must have been dead some little time. Mrs. Carlyle's health had been for several months feeble, but not in a state to excite any alarm. Mr. Carlyle is still in Scotland.

The late Mrs. Carlyle was a woman of great intelligence and culture. She, as well as her distinguished husband, corresponded, if we remember rightly, with Goethe, and other foreign authors of repute. In the full collection of Goethe's poems will be found two or three poetical scraps addressed to "Madame Carlyle, Scotland." One of these was originally written on a visiting card, which Goethe sent to the wife of his friend and admirer, and the latter, roughly translated, ran somewhat in this fashion:—

"Messengers like this we send To the coming of a friend; This poor card can only say him. The Scotsman says the deceased lady was the daughter of "the once well-known Dr. Welsh, of Haddington, and with gifts and graces of her own, she inherited much of the force and penetration of her father's intellect. She was a poet, and to be the life companion of Thomas Carlyle."

The funeral of Mrs. Carlyle took place on Thursday, April 26. Her remains were laid within the choir of the ruined Cathedral at Haddington, in the same grave as her father, Dr. Welsh. The pall-bearers were Mr. Thomas Carlyle, Chief mourner, Dr. Carlyle, Mr. John Forster, the Hon. Mr. Twissleton, Rev. Mr. Welsh, Mr. Dodds, banker, Haddington, Mr. Mann, of Leyton Main, and Dr. Thomas Howson, formerly surgeon, and the father of Mrs. Carlyle. The funeral was attended by a number of the older residents who had known the deceased lady in youth, and her father, who was much esteemed in the town as a medical practitioner. There were also a number of ladies and gentlemen present in the churchyard.

An Amusing Court Scene. A WITNESS WHO WOULD NOT BE BARRAGED. The report of a late trial in Cincinnati, which we find in the Gazette of that city, contains one bright passage. The case was one in which the heirs of Mrs. Schofield, an English lady of eccentric habits, who died in Cincinnati, in 1853, endeavored to persuade the Court to set aside the will on several grounds. The principal witness was a Mrs. Chesbro, aged seventy. She had been asked half-a-dozen times as to the age of one of Mrs. Schofield's nephews. The report continues:—

"A. Tell me, I did not know his age. His birth register is in England, and I never went to see it." Court. Mrs. Chesbro, it is perhaps proper to ask you that you may be patient, and answer all the questions counsel may put to you. Witness. So I do, but I don't see any use of answering the same question over and over again.

Court. Some of us may hear all your answers, and if it often occurs you to repeat questions. Witness. I generally speak and through for anybody in this court-room to hear me, and I think that the lawyers would attend to their business; they wouldn't have to witness more than once. Court. I proceed with the examination. Q. You say Mrs. Schofield drank a great deal of liquor, and did she keep it in a jar? A. No; she kept it in a demijohn in a basket; I never looked into the basket to see whether it was glass or not, but I think it was; if it had been glass, I have carried it a hundred times for her, if a strict account had been kept to Mr. Smith's liquor store to get it filled; I remember Mr. Smith used often to say, "Beware, Mrs. Chesbro, beware!" and I would answer, "No; it's the same drunk," but I knew I was joking, and he knew who the liquor was for.

Q. What kind of liquor did she use? A. A brandy, or the real old cognac. Q. How did she drink it, pure or mixed? A. She is often took it pure as any wine, when she wanted to be made; if into wine, she used to drink it out of a little black teapot; that was brandy that I bought for her; the demijohn was filled every week, but I didn't fill it; she had a little Englishman who used to go for her very often.

Question by a Juror. How did she attend to her business when she had a store on Fifth street? A. I don't know exactly, but as I told you before, she was always well up in money matters. Q. Was she sober then? Witness. No; she was never sober. Drinking had become a sort of second nature with her. She was like a room many lawyers that I know of, they can't lead a case without being half drunk. (Laughter.) It's a fact, I tell you, I have seen many a lawyer that never undertook to try a case until, as they say, he had "two sheets in the wind and one a flutter." (Renewed laughter.)

LIQUORS. CHESNUT GROVE WHISKY, No. 226 North THIRD Street.

If anything is known of the absolute purity of this Whisky, the following certificate should do it. There is no alcoholic stimulant known commanding such a reputation. PHILADELPHIA, September 9, 1858.

We have carefully tested the sample of CHESNUT GROVE WHISKY, and have found it to be pure and of the highest quality, and we have no objection to its being used for medicinal purposes, or in any other way in which it may be used. JAMES R. CHILTON, M. D., Analytical Chemist.

TOPPOFF, March 7, 1859. I have made a chemical analysis of commercial samples of CHESNUT GROVE WHISKY, which proves to be free from the heavy Fossil Oils, and perfectly pure and of the highest quality. The Whisky is distilled from the grain used in manufacturing it. Respectfully, A. A. HAYES, M. D., State Assayer, No. Boylston street.
